Spring

For more than 30 years, businesses that are engaged in the recruitment, employment and retention of persons with disabilities have repeated a very common message to the many providers of rehabilitation services who are attempting to help those individuals become employed: “Rehab people....coordinate your contacts with business”. The back story from them is obvious. They do not want to repeatedly explain their needs, work with multiple agencies/staff who serve the same clientele, or try to build and rebuild relationships with the hundreds of “placement folks” advocating for hires. This session will look at the big picture of collaboration, current systems in place to minimize overlap, and training modules that may help state and local groups re-visit this challenge from our valued customers: employers!
